

We know interprofessional teamwork is important. But how do we DO it?

Interprofessional teams are made, not born. Even experienced clinicians and faculty need training. This practical, hands-on program provides everything you need to develop and assess interprofessional education programs and collaborative team-based care.

If you're a busy educator, clinician, or administrator, this is the interprofessional training your team needs.

The Training: The nationally-recognized Train-the-Trainer (T3) Team Development Program is a unique 3 ½ day hands-on program that guides participants through the development, implementation, and assessment of interprofessional education (IPE) programs and team-based care. CME/CE credits provided.

What You'll Learn: T3 combines theory, simulations, skill-building and project development to:

- Apply the science of collaboration to real-world patient care.
- Employ teamwork principles to improve efficiency and quality of care delivery and reduce error.
- Design, implement, and assess team-based approaches to complex health conditions that address health disparities and improve patient outcomes.
- Develop effective and engaging interprofessional education and team-based care training activities.
- Utilize team leadership and communication skills to support team-based care.
- Work with other healthcare professionals to promote and maintain mutual respect and shared values.

Who Benefits: Effective teamwork improves patient outcomes and staff engagement, reduces medical errors, and supports important quality and safety initiatives. All healthcare professionals are encouraged to attend this comprehensive, clinically-relevant training. Past attendees include:

-Educators	-Nurses	-Physicians	-Pharmacists
-Mental Health Providers	-Administrators	-Community Health	-Case Workers
-Social Workers	-PT/ OT/ RT	-Clergy	-Home Health

The Trainers: The UVA Center for ASPIRE (Academic Strategic Partnerships for Interprofessional Research & Education) is an expert team of clinicians, researchers and educators dedicated to IPE and team-based care.

UVA 2019 IPE Trainings: April 24-27 and Nov. 6-9, 2019
